

Summer Session Business Course Program Listed

To meet growing defense needs for manpower, some of the business course offerings scheduled for the 1952 summer sessions will be taught in the late afternoon, according to Dr. Richard Sielaff, head of the business and economics department.

"These late afternoon classes will not only provide local industries with manpower in the face of a tight employment situation," says Dr. Sielaff, "but will personally benefit the student, enabling him to take full-time work during the morning and early afternoon."

Marketing, corporation finance and labor problems will be offered the first summer session, followed by advertising, economics of foreign trade and government regulations of business during the second term. These courses will be taught at 4:00 and 5:00 p. m. Monday through Friday.

Hoffren Will Play Trumpet Selections in Solo Role

James Hoffren will present his graduating recital next Sunday at 4:00 p. m. in the Main auditorium. He is presently teaching brass lessons for Mr. Magnell, who is on a leave of absence. Mr. Hoffren, who has worked extensively with the trumpet, also plays the French horn. A top ranking student from Cloquet, he also finds time to play with the Duluth Symphony.

Accompanying Mr. Hoffren on the piano will be Miss Beverly Apter, a sophomore majoring in music. Specializing in piano, Miss Apter originally came from Duluth.

Miss Ione O'Donovan offers several piano selections in the concert. Among them will be Two Arabesques by Debussy and Sonata in E Major, opus 7 by Grieg. Miss O'Donovan is a freshman from Hibbing and she is also majoring in music.

Mr. Hoffren will play a variety of numbers. Among the selections will be "Trumpet Concerto" by Joseph Haydn; "Cantabile et Scherzeto" by Philippe Gaubert; "Concerto I, opus 11" by William Brandt; "Concerto for Trumpet" by Vito Giamini; and for his final number he has chosen the difficult "Sonata No. 2, opus 21" for trumpet and piano by Ralph Dale Miller.

Misfeldt Elected Kappa Pi Delegate

At a recent meeting of Kappa Pi, Willard Misfeldt was elected as official delegate to the national convention of that organization. Selected as alternates were Dick Olson, Olga Visias and Sharon Traub.

The national organization convenes bi-annually on even-numbered years. This year's convention will be held at Kansas State Teachers college in Pittsburg, Kansas, on March 13, 14 and 15.

MISS GORFORD TO SPEAK

Girls: Watch Your Grooming

Miss Barbara Gorford, member of the Revlon College board of New York City, will address the women of the UMD campus in a convocation next Thursday.

The Revlon College board has been set up as an educational service for college women and strives to give them competent advice and assistance with grooming problems. It works upon the assumption that while a college training is mandatory and that good jobs are virtually impossible without the proper educational background, this is not enough.

Each career girl deserves and certainly should be armed, not only with the degree, but also with the assurance of knowing that her make-up is right, her clothes are right, and secure in the knowledge that she "looks the job." Annually this board receives thousands of letters asking questions concerning just such problems. To help answer some of these questions personally, Miss Gorford is making a tour of U. S. colleges, and is including UMD on her itinerary.

Since personal grooming is pretty much an individual problem, and for those who will have classes immediately following the convo and will not be able to benefit from the discussion, special consultations for smaller groups can be arranged Thursday afternoon and Friday to be given to these individual problems. Any group which would be interested in one of these smaller group consultations should contact Miss Harrison, who is in charge of arranging Miss Gorford's time.

Test Application Deadline Nears

Major General Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service, recently reminded college students that applications for the April 24 Selective Service Qualification Test must be postmarked not later than midnight March 10, next Monday.

Application blanks may be obtained by students from the nearest local board. They do not have to return home to the local board which has jurisdiction over them.

Students Urged To Appear for Chron Pictures

Chronicle editor Cathy Brown has announced that a group picture schedule for the Chronicle has been arranged. Pictures will be taken next Monday and Tuesday in the auditorium.

It is important that all club members appear at the time designated in the schedule.

Faculty members are requested to excuse students from classes during the time a picture is scheduled.

Music Department Presents Winter Concert Tuesday

The Department of Music will present its Winter concert next Tuesday at 8:00 p. m. in the University auditorium.

The program will be presented by the University Chorus and the Women's Glee club under the direction of Mr. Allen Downs, and the Men's Glee club, conducted by Dr. Albert Hess.

The complete program includes:

Weather Training Course Offered

Second semester seniors with credit for one year of college physics and mathematics through integral calculus are now eligible to apply for USAF commissions and government-expense training to become weather officers with the Air Weather Service.

Successful applicants will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Air Force Reserve and will be ordered to active duty by mid-August. The applicants will then begin a 12-month meteorology course at one of seven participating colleges and universities.

Students interested in applying for the weather training course are urged to write immediately to the Chief, Air Weather Service, Andrews Air Force Base, Washington 25, D. C.

Those accepted will be commissioned immediately and will attend the weather course as second lieutenants in full pay status.

Both men and women are eligible to apply.

All-School Dance Set Tomorrow at Spalding

The freshman class is sponsoring an all-school mixer dance tomorrow at the Hotel Spalding. The dance, starting at 9:00 p. m. and continuing until midnight, will be stag or drag.

Admission is by activity card only. Music will be furnished by Terry Evanson and his orchestra. The dance is informal.

The dance, originally scheduled for January 19, is the first major social project of the freshman class.

"Exultate Justi" by L. da Vidana; "Go Forth With Courage" by Tomas Luis de Victoria; "O All Ye Nations" by Heinrich Schütz; "Russian Easter Priest's Blessing" by Andre Kipolyoff.

"Son of Miriam" by Herbert Fromm; "The Power of Music" by Henry Lawes; "Monotone" by Norman Lockwood; "The Dark Eyed Sailor" by R. Vaughan Williams; "Lullaby" by Alexander Koshetz; "The Breadth and Extent of Man's Empire" by Harl McDonald, and "In Praise of Music" by Paul Hindemith.

Featured as soloists will be Don Sundquist and Patricia Anderson. In addition to the chorus and glee clubs, the instrumental ensemble, composed of Janet McEldowney and Lois Johnson, violins; Nathan Bindler, viola; Grover Sayre, bass; John McEldowney, oboe; Janet Kristensen, flute; and Audrey Johnson, bassoon, will perform.

Gamma Theta Phi Holds Initiation

Gamma Theta Phi fraternity held a formal initiation dinner last Saturday night at the Duluth Athletic club.

The evening's festivities commenced with toasts, after which dinner was served. Following the dinner, the guest speaker, Mr. Harry B. Leighton, investment consultant at the Northern Minnesota National bank, was introduced.

His topic of discussion included the value of fraternity brotherhood and the necessity of preparing for one's future when the opportunities are available.

Highlight of the program was the initiation of new fraternity members into Gamma Theta Phi, and the presentation of their plans by the president, Bernard Dinner, and the vice-president, Tom Sermon.

The new members are Jack Duncan, Phillip Eldien, Kenneth Kulus, Charles Mead, Jude Oberg, Harry Platzter and Jack Wangenstein.

Bill Parish served as chairman of the event.

Schedule of Graduation Requirements; Commencement Activities Aid Seniors

Seniors are advised to read closely the following schedule of commencement activity and graduation requirements. Dr. Von Glahn, chairman of the Commencement committee, stated that a public announcement of the schedule may prevent the confusion which existed last year. The schedule sequence is in chronological order.

It is the responsibility of each graduating student to check with his or her major department and minor departments as to whether or not all requirements in course work for graduation have been fulfilled or will be fulfilled by June.

All graduating students should check with the Health service as to whether the senior physical examination has been taken; if such has not been the case, the examination (which is also required of two-year graduates) should be scheduled at once with the Health service.

All applications for graduation in June are due, in the OSPS, on or before March 14 at the latest; all students expecting to graduate should check the list of graduates, posted on the bulletin board on the second floor of Main, as to spelling of their names, the correct listing of their degree, and the correct identification of their major and minors. Any discrepancies or omissions should be reported at once to Mrs. Anderson in OSPS.

Reservations for caps and gowns should be made at once at the Bookstore; the deadline for this is also March 14. The following information must be given the Bookstore staff: height in shoes and cap or hat size.

Payment of graduation fees is due on or before April 25, at the Business Office, to insure participation in the June Commencement.

Applications for graduation "in absentia" are due, in the form of written petitions including reasons for proposed absence from Commencement, in the office of the Provost on June 1 at the latest.

Cap and Gown Day (Honor's Assembly and Graduate's Reception) is on Tuesday, June 3. Attendance of seniors in academic costume is required, as far as the assembly is concerned.

Baccalaureate is scheduled for Sunday evening, June 8, probably for Pilgrim Congregational church. Attendance of all seniors, in academic costume, is required.

Commencement rehearsal, attendance at which is compulsory

Report from Your COUNCIL..

by BOB LEESTAMPER

Student Government—Why?

I could answer this question by tracing the student government's role to the university but even more important is its role to the students themselves.

By participation in student government individuals have the opportunity to develop a mature approach to their political and social responsibilities to the community at large. The most efficient and far-reaching vehicle to develop this approach is the student government of a college or university, for unencumbered student government at least in a partial sense duplicates the conditions inherent in any democratic society.

A self-guided student society provides the opportunity for its component parts—student representatives and those represented alike—to gain experience in such politically desirable activities as casting intelligent votes, participating in the solution of problems, weighing the relative merits of issues which are brought before them, and generally shaping the environment of their extra-curricular existence. For those who become leaders of student opinion, student government is an even more valuable laboratory, for within its functioning they can gain proficiency in administrative techniques, they can learn how to responsibly represent the opinions of others, and they can practice the intelligent leadership of public action.

Unfortunately, the student governments of our present-day institutions often fall short of their educational potentialities. This failure can be ascribed to various deficiencies in both operation and structure. Archaic or impracticable constitutions, lack of working relationships between student governments and administrations or faculties, student apathy, immaturity of student leadership, financial difficulties, all these and many other factors help to prevent or destroy the positive benefits that student governments can render.

By participating in student government you learn early in life your responsibilities to your community but just as important you realize your privileges. These privileges include those of discussion, debate, assembly, communication and dissemination of personal and group views, as well as many others.

It is quite possible for you, as a student to acquire a degree by fulfilling a few qualifications such as completing 180 credits and maintain a C average. After this you can be considered a college graduate but this is often a long distance from having a college education. What is generally considered a classic college education contains more factors than 180 credits.

I certainly do not feel that participation in student government is the only additional factor necessary but I do believe it is one that is certainly rewarding to those students who feel the sense of responsibility that it calls for.

Students Discover "Sticks" Stickler

Rudy Pinola, graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and presently teaching statistics (better known as "sticks"), got his one o'clock class in a hilarious uproar the other day.

Rudy was in the process of working out a problem on the blackboard and had to fiddle with numbers like 776.352179 and 1,985.748923. Deciding that it was unnecessary to work with such complex numerals, Rudy announced to the class that he would lop off the decimal numbers for the sake of illustration.

"Whole numbers are good enough to show you how a problem is done," said Rudy.

Anyone who is taking statistics knows that working with numbers that go six decimal places is a common occurrence. Knowing that this is true, a bright little boy piped up with the remark, "When you see my mid-quarter don't be surprised if I put a notation somewhere which says that I worked these problems simply for the sake of illustration."

UMD's Lone Silver Star Winner Tells Real Story of Korea War

(Editor's Note—This is the story of Darrel Strandberg as he lived it during his tour of duty in Korea. It's a bitter, brutal story, full of the complexity of war and the simplicity of life — and death — in a foxhole.)

By DAROLD STRANDBERG
As Told to Dwaine Ganyo

The student directory entry reads Strandberg, Darold L., freshman from Mahtowa, Minn., and should follow with, "now residing at 5148 London Road, Duluth."

A little over a year ago it might have read Private Darold Strandberg, of Mahtowa, Minn., residing in a foxhole somewhere within 40 miles of the 38th parallel in Korea. Or Private Strandberg, awarded Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action. Or one year ago tomorrow, Private Strandberg, wounded in action.

Those are the high points in the recent military history of Darold Strandberg, pre-veterinary student now enrolled at UMD. Those and his marriage shortly before he went overseas to the "swellest girl in the world." Here's the rest of his story as it might have been told in letters to his twin brother:

Jan. 29—Foxhole (one the Reds dug for us), 1 mile north of Wonju. Relaxing for a couple of hours with Struck of Iowa and a bazooka. Rest of the company are on tanks out on a combat patrol toward Hoengsong. Hundreds of refugees streaming south past us. Little kids with just straw sandals and ragged cotton clothes on. It's 20 below zero.

I've really been going since I last wrote.

Two weeks of continuous long combat patrols. Feeling out the enemy. He's scarce. Guess the cold must bother him more than it does us. It's been 20 to 30 miles every day not counting up and down hill. Been so many frozen feet I've had to carry the machine gun three-fourths of the time. That with six layers of clothes, M1 rifle and ammo makes a load. Didn't think the human body could take it. We never get enough to eat, but we're not starving anyway.

Lee accidentally kicked my can of noodles and meat over yesterday. Every time the can tipped over some more would spill out. Damn it, you can't make this kind of mileage on half rations. And those water purification pills. Supposed to wait an hour before you drink the water. If you do the water is frozen solid again.

Feb. 12—Finally got some paper and time. Started meeting opposition about the 3rd and it's been foxholes ever since. Still in one piece but sure as hell don't know why. Platoon down to 8 men. I was made squad leader back there but I don't know how in hell you can fight with only eight men. Lt. Jordon got it on hill 442. He stood up right next to me reaching for a grenade. I saw his face as he got hit. Kicked around and gurgled a little bit. Rest of the guys got scared for a minute and ran back. They told me to drag him out if I could. Twigs snapping 6 inches from my head. Medic shot him with morphine and we started back with him.

It was snowing. His eyes were half open and the snow falling right in them. I said there's no use carrying him any further, he's don. The medic said no, the morphine is just taking effect. Morphine looey like Jordan don't grow on trees.

Fox Co. took the hill next morning without firing a shot. The Reds had bugged out.

INTRODUCING . . .

Duluth's Pee-Wee Champs

Five UMD laboratory school students are members of the Glen Avon sextet, which recently won their second successive National Pee-Wee hockey championship, defeating Wheeler of Duluth, 3-1, in the finals. The tournament was held at the Curling club last week-end. Glen Avon was victorious in the Pee-Wee tournament last year at Madison Square Garden, New York.

Glen Avon defeated Sault Ste. Marie, 8-3, in the opening round and then whipped Lynn, Massachusetts, in the semi-finals, 6-3, before clashing with Wheeler. Wheeler gained the finals by virtue of a 5-2 semi-final win over Eveleth.

Four of the players, Jerry and Bob Fryberger, Chuck Voss and Rusty Ingersoll, are eighth graders, while Dates Fryberger is in the sixth grade. Incidentally, the Fryberger boys are sons of the Glen Avon coach, Robert Fryberger.

The Glen Avon sextet won 20, tied two and lost three over the season in winning both the Duluth Midget league title and the national crown. Glen Avon made two trips during the season, one to International Falls where they won one, tied one and lost one, and the other to St. Cloud where they won one and lost one.

All the boys, except Chuck Voss, participated in the tournament at Madison Square Garden last year. Two of the players, Jerry and Bob Fryberger, have completed Pee-Wee hockey play. Rusty Ingersoll and Chuck Voss have one year of eligibility remaining while Dates Fryberger can compete for two more seasons.

Glen Avon holds its practice sessions on their own rink on the corner of Woodland and St. Andrews Avenues. They also practiced on the Curling club ice prior to the tournament.

The trophy which is awarded the winning team must be won three years in succession before any team can gain permanent possession of it. Glen Avon has won the trophy twice, and with the modest spirit and the fervent desire to win displayed by the young hockey hopefuls, there is a good chance they will win again next year.

Seniors who did not place an order for announcements Wednesday or Thursday please contact Ira Burhans, P.O. 300, to make arrangements for an order.

"MY GUN IS THE JURY"

By MICKEY SPILLBLOOD

Chapter 4—"IKE HATCHET HAS A BAD DAY"

SYNOPSIS: Ike Hatchet has been trying without success to find the murderer of his ex-wife, Marge. Due to the circumstances of the case, all his former girl friends are under suspicion. Ike has spent the past week trudging from one girl's apartment to the next. So far, he hasn't found a thing on any of them.

THE MORNING AFTER MY AFFAIR WITH GERI, I woke up with a terrific hangover.

I had dreamt all night about an old flame of mine named Ginny Martini. She was a long-stemmed, olive-skinned beauty who used to stuff herself with pimentoes.

I had quarded four girls before her, and she was my fifth. I really had a case.

Her charm was intoxicating and she was a good mixer, but I didn't like the set-up. I wanted to play it straight, but she expected me to chaser. Then something happened that really soured me.

I thought she was an old-fashioned girl, but she turned out to be a pink lady. She was selling heavy-water to the Russians.

I was working for the FBI at the time, and I knew it was my duty to liquidate her.

When I got to her apartment, she was eating pimentoes and sipping a cocktail she called a "Fellow Traveller." It was a sort of "Sidecar" made with Vodka.

"Hello, Ike," she said drunkenly. "Have a pimentoe."

She had put on weight since I last saw her. Too many pimentoes. The strapless gown she was wearing looked as if she'd been poured into it, and forgot to say "when." She was really in her cups.

The glint in her eye warned me. I whirled around and saw her henchman, Molotov Cocktail, standing behind a drape with his sickle poised. I let him have it and he fell to the floor with a sickening thud.

I turned to Ginny. "The jigger's up," I said, and poured a shot into her.

The pimentoe she was holding fell to the floor with a sickening thud. Ginny followed with a dull splash.

As I stood over the empty vessel from which her life had flown, all my old love for Ginny surged up in me. To drown my sorrow, I grabbed a bottle from the table and drained it. Then I grabbed another bottle and polished it off. Then I grabbed a third bottle and drank its contents. That's how I finished the case.

I'll never forget Ginny. In my trophy room there's a small red object carefully mounted in a beautiful green olive. Ginny's name is attached to it. It's one of my fondest pimentoes.

The dream had left me unhappy, and the situation I awoke to made me even more so. I had fallen out of bed with a sickening thud to face another day of fruitless search for Marge's murderer.

And I knew, deep down inside, that this was going to be one of my BAD DAYS.

I got up, dressed, and left my apartment. The elevator boy wized off at me so I gave him the shaft. I forgot we were on the fifteenth floor. He landed in the basement with a sickening thud. It was one of my bad days.

Francie was the next suspect. I hopped in my car and tore off down the road. At the corner ahead I saw a Boy Scout helping an old lady across the street. I missed the Boy Scout. The old lady bounced along the pavement making sickening thuds. It was one of my bad days.

I've always had a mean streak, deep down inside. When I was a kid, we only had one chicken, but she laid an egg every morning. I used to run down to the barn before breakfast and make her put it back.

I pulled up near Francie's apartment, and the car door closed behind me with a sickening thud. I would have walked off into the fog, only there wasn't any. It was a bad day.

EDITOR'S MAILBOX

(Editor's Note — The political opinions expressed in last week's letter to the editor were those of the writer, Andy Larson, and not of the editorial staff of the STATESMAN. We were in error when we failed to clarify this fact last week. The opinions expressed in today's letter to the editor are, likewise, those of Dudley Johnson's and not of the editorial staff of this paper.)

Dear Editor:

Last week, Mr. Larson tried to clarify the Minnesota, as well as the national political picture. In doing so, he made some broad statements which have no basis in fact and he was inconsistent in his line of reasoning. Therefore it seems that an evaluation of his statements is necessary.

Mr. Larson stated that he is a former Eisenhower supporter and now a Stassen supporter. As for my political leanings, I have always been and still am a supporter of Senator Robert A. Taft as the Republican best qualified to be the party's nominee for president and as the man best qualified to be our next president.

First of all, Mr. Larson implied that a Stassen-Eisenhower battle in this state would make Harold Stassen a political non-entity. Ignoring the fact that this is a sad commentary on Stassen's popular appeal and vote-getting ability in his own state, Mr. Larson then said this "political assassination of our favorite son" would aid Taft and give him the nomination. If this were true things would be quite simple but it seems that Warren and indirectly Eisenhower and MacArthur also aspire to be our next president. However it would seem that Mr. Larson's fears are a thing of the past because of the recent

Supreme Court decision removing Eisenhower's name from the ballot.

Mr. Larson then goes on to say that the voters will not buy a "pig-in-a-poke," i.e. Eisenhower; nor can Eisenhower win on popularity alone. Yet he would have us support Stassen on the premise that he will go all-out to draft Eisenhower who, by the way, Stassen has asked to lift the "khaki curtain." Apparently, it is perfectly all right for the Republican delegates to accept a "pig-in-a-poke."

The next point he brought up was that the polls have indicated that Eisenhower is most popular and that he is more popular with the voters than the delegates. Such a statement is too general to really mean anything. Admittedly, Eisenhower would be more popular from the Democratic voter's point of view than Taft, but such a consideration is not worthy of comment. Granted that Eisenhower is more popular than Taft in a poll of independent voters, it must be remembered that this is an artificial, "hero" popularity and rests mainly on the basis that the General has not committed himself on any specific issues. The Dewey-Truman debacle of 1948 has impressed the potential delegates to the convention that the Republican party must stand on principle and not elect a pussy-footing candidate who is all things to all men.

Speaking of polls, if Mr. Larson had carefully analyzed a greater number of sources he would have found that Senator Taft is the favorite among Republican voters. According to Dr. George Gallup's most recent poll of all segments of the voting public Senator Taft would get 5 percent more of the total vote than President Truman! Of course the validity of opinion polls can be questioned due to their error in the last election but this factor would apply equally well to Eisenhower, Truman or Taft.

Mr. Larson then goes on to attack the "borderline Republicans" who are out to get Stassen. He further says that a vote for Stassen is a vote for Eisenhower and a vote for Eisenhower is a vote for Taft. This is extremely confusing and apparently illogical but it seems that the Eisenhower delegates hate Stassen so much that they would embrace Taft rather than Stassen. As any argument on this point is post-dated, let it suffice to say that the point seems debatable due to the wide variance in thinking between the Taft and Eisenhower groups. As for the statement that a vote for Stassen is a vote for Eisenhower, then shouldn't this fact be made clear to the voting public? Mr. Larson's argument confirms the oft-repeated charge that Mr. Stassen is not a candidate in his own right and is front-running for Eisenhower.

No longer is Minnesota a key to the 1952 election. With only Senator Humphrey and Harold Stassen in the primary our only choice seems to be between voting for a Republican or a Democrat. Perhaps an abolishment of the presidential primary is in order, with a subsequent saving to the state of some $300,000.

—Dudley Johnson.

Final examinations for the Winter Quarter will be conducted from Saturday, March 15, through Friday, March 21. Individual instructors will notify their classes regarding the schedule for particular class examinations. Examination periods will be two hours in length. Students who may find themselves scheduled for more than two examinations in one day may petition for adjustment of their examination schedule.

Entertainment

What might be the entire population of an average Italian community appeared before the technicolor cameras when M-G-M's spectacular production of "Quo Vadis" went into production in Italy, with Robert Taylor and Deborah Kerr heading a cast of a total of 30,000 persons.

In the epic production starting at the Garrick theatre, Taylor plays the role of the handsome warrior, Marcus Vinicius, with Miss Kerr cast as the slave girl, Lygia. Also in key roles in the story of the birth of Christianity in a pagan world are Leo Genn as Petronius, arbiter of elegance in the court of the Emperor Nero, and Peter Ustinov as the egocentric Nero.

In support of the four principals, 110 players were selected for speaking roles, with Director Mervyn LeRoy traveling to London and Paris for the purpose of interviewing and testing hundreds of candidates before a camera turned. Back in Hollywood, the big M-G-M casting office was kept on the alert for possible candidates. The search for three giants, each of whom had to be over 6'6" tall, spread to Germany, Austria and other countries.

Most of the key principals were imported to Rome from England, where all had distinguished themselves on stage and screen.

Concert Pianist University Guest Next Thursday Night

It has been said that child proteges do not make adult successes very often, but here is one musician to be added to those who belie the theory.

Irene Rosenberg, concert pianist, will be the guest artist with the University Concert Series Thursday, March 13, at 8:15 p. m. in the auditorium. She made her debut as a concert pianist when she was eleven years old.

She began a six-year study under Sascha Gorodnitski at the age of eight. When she was ten, Machlin Morrow invited her to play the solo in Mozart's D Minor Concerto, with the WPA Symphony orchestra over a New York radio station.

The New York Herald Tribune had this to say about this pianist who began her career so early: "One of the most distinguished and articulate pianists this reviewer has heard in recent years. She understands the essential nature and message of many kinds of music and draws from each such qualities as are a tribute to her own personality. Maturity of technique and of interpretative concept in each case gave the impression of years of meditation and synthesis."

Miss Rosenberg has studied with such notables as Isabelle Vengerova and Carl Friedberg, under her Mannes Music School Scholarship. When she attended the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood on a summer scholarship, the world-renowned Serge Koussevitsky chose her to appear as a soloist in the Franck Symphony variations, with the Tanglewood symphony.

Her first New York appearance was in February, 1948, in Town Hall. She has toured Europe, playing in such cities as Paris, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Zurich and Oslo.

Commencement

for all seniors, will take place at 10:00 a. m. on the morning of Commencement, June 13.

Commencement exercises proper are scheduled for Friday evening, June 13. All graduates are required to attend, in academic costume, unless excused in advance, in writing, by the Provost.

Failure to observe any of the required actions outlined above, may and likely will, result in failure to graduate from UMD this June.

If there are any questions concerning Commencement and graduation procedure, please consult Dr. von Glahn, chairman of the Commencement Committee, at Room 18 in Washburn hall.

Hamline Pipers Vanquish Branch In Final Contest

The Bulldogs rang the curtain down last Saturday night on their most disastrous, from a won-lost point of view, MIAC basketball season. They rang it down with another loss, this time to Hamline, 75-58, for a conference record of 1-11 and a season's record of 3-19.

The Bulldogs held Jim Fritsche down to 14 points but the Pipers' Dave Hegna, 6' 7½" center, poured 22 points through the meshes. Gerlach used three different centers on him. The other two big guns on Joe Hutton's starting five, Thorgaard and Gussner, each caged 11 points.

The Doggies played this one without their little playmaking guard, Chuck Hill. Chuck came down with the flu the day before the game. John McKeag paced the Bulldog hoopsters with 14 points on five baskets and four free throws, most of them coming in the last half. The other major UMD point-getters were U. Jim with eight, Mel Koivisto with nine and Bruce Paulson with 13 before he fouled out.

DIMINUTIVE MEL KOIVISTO goes up for one of his "jumping jack" shots against Augsburg. Koivisto was one of two freshmen on Coach Joe Gerlach's starting quintet, sharing guard honors with Chuck Hill. The aforementioned duo, sophomores Bruce Paulson and John McKeag and junior U. Jim Anderson, formed the starting five throughout most of the season. Reserves who saw frequent action during the past campaign were Owen Beatty and Jerry Weld, freshmen from Central, Warren Strudwick, Ken Johnson and Don Weaver. "We just met teams better than we were, but whom we hope to be better than in the near future." So said hockey coach Gordy Eddolls regarding his team's showing during the past season. The enthusiastic Eddolls added, "Although the squad was on the losing side, the spirit and determination of every player on the team made the season a successful one and one that is a stepping-stone to a great future in hockey at UMD."

The ten-game schedule played by the Branchmen this year is but an indication of the trend toward the future of hockey as the number of games played was double that of the 1951 season.

With a growing increase in the number of games being scheduled and the lengthening of the hockey season, the ice sport at the Branch may soon see the Bulldogs playing the sextets of various "big-time" colleges and universities.

The addition of Joe Kolar, Taconite, and some freshmen from area high schools helped first-year-coach Eddolls considerably as Wally Heikkinen was the lone returning regular from the previous year. "Heik" and Ron Sjoberg, a sophomore from Duluth Central, were the only monogram winners returning from a team that had won two of five contests.

The experienced Kolar, a junior classman, is a former Duluth city league player and performed at the center slot as well as on defense.

Frosh pucksters Ron Scott, Bob Bostrom, Tim Harney and Bob Juneo plus Senior Wimpy Shegrud, Tommy Ventrucci, Ron Kramnic, John Thomas and Tony Mendesh formed the main core of the Branch aggregation.

Scott and Harney, from Morgan Park and Cathedral, respectively, served Eddolls as defensemen along with sophomore Ventrucci, a native of Eveleth. Juneo and Bostrom saw regular service on the flanks as did Kramnic, Thomas and Shegrud.

The diminutive Kramnic is a junior from Duluth Denfeld and had seen service in the Duluth city loop prior to playing for the Bulldogs.

The bespectacled Mendesh served his first year in the nets as the Denfeld sophomore developed with experience, making many an impressive stop.

In conference play, the skaters dropped six games, including two to St. Thomas' defending MIAC champs.

Hockey Ends with Loss to Alumni

By DALE HOLTER

The Bulldogs wound up their hockey season last week when they dropped a 6-4 decision to the Alumni.

Wally Heikkinen started the scoring on an assist from Ron Scott at 2:10 of the first period. Wilson of the Alumni then scored twice on assists from Apostle, and Samuelson added another unassisted.

Ron Kramnic tallied for UMD with one minute remaining in the first period on an assist by Bob Juneo, but Ed Berry, assisted by Evan Nyhus, retaliated for the Alumni.

In the second period, the Bulldogs knotted the count at 4-4 when Kramnic scored his second goal of the game at 7:26 and Joe Kolar hit the nets at 8:50 on an assist from Christianson.

Experience was the winning factor in the third period as the Alumni tallied twice, first by Johnson at 4:55 and later by Nyhus at 8:05.

Klobuschar Gets 28 In I-M Cage Tourney

Two games were played last Thursday to complete the first round of the Intramural tournament. The results of the games that have previously been played are: Lakers 41, Carps 31; Unknowns 21, ROTC 13; Square Roots 39, Gamma Theta Phi 24; Bulldogs 25, Parasites 13.

In the first of the two games played Thursday, the West Rangers' Al Klobuschar poured in 14 field goals for a total of 28 points.
